Summary: Left on bases-Richmond, 5; Norfolk, 6. Base on balls-Off Shenn, I. Hit by pitched ball-Raley. Time of game-1:30. Umpire-Norcum.

BY GUS MALBERT.

Momentarily, it was a conflict, or, in other words, a ball game. But just as almost everybody was prepared for a thrilling afternoon's entertainment the mauling-rams of the Colt offense started to work, and the result proved disastrous for Mr. Shenn, who, aside from the fact that he works for an alien clan, is a very mild-mannered young man. Jim Vance started his career as a member of the Richmond All of which information leads to the statement that Richmond won, the count being 8 to 1.

Shenn broke from cover like a world-beater. He had everything, and in four innings seven handlers of the ash for Manager Steve Griffin had been waylaid on strikes. Two surly smites had been secured from his benders, and he was on a fair way to bring Norfolk out of the slough of defeat into which the Shafferless sufferers have fallen. Jim Vance was meeting the pace of the opposing slabman, and while not so forcible at deceiving his foemen, went six boxes, with one hit against his record, and only one runner advanced as far as third, this through the generosity of Doc Newton, who booted Long's knock and, trying to recover himself, threw over John Raley's head.

Hoisted by His Own Petard.

But let's hasten to when the ramming really happened. Charley Strain stopped the invaders' half of the fifth by pulling down on a nifty sort of catch Kunkle's high loft. Buck Venable tore the shade aside for Richmond, nailing a corking legitimate single down left field foul line. Kircher tried to pull a trick play, at least it was a trick play when Noah paired off the occupants of the Ark. He trotted toward the fence with the leather in his hand to urge Buck to second. The ruse worked far too well, and when Venable pulled up at second he had earned a double from an ordinary single. Strain shot a fast drive over second, which put Venable in the harbor with the first count.

After that it was merely a question of mathematical education. So kindly did they take to Mr. Shenn that the box ended with five smites, for a total of four runs. Vance followed Charles with a bam, and was in turn followed by Connie Bresnahan with a threebase clout to offer, which cleaned the paths of all but himself. Laval pushed Connie in with his biff to the right corner, and was forced at second by Sandy Piez. Sandy walked to second, and in an attempt to take third was nailed, leaving John Raley at the bat.

Effective in All but Two.

The peculiar part of it is that Shenn was horribly effective save in two frames—the fifth, already recounted, and the eighth bout, which we will tell now. In these two innings he weakened weefully, and the Colts had little difficulty in hitting when and where they willed. John Raley pushed the ball far a-field for three bases to open the eighth. Newton, with a solid drive to left, pulled down another triple, and, of course, John scored. Venable was an easy out but Strain beat his drive to Whitcraft, and Rogers, with the count two and three, came across with a screaming one-base wham, and Connie Bresnahan made his third clout count when he beat his

HOWSE STARS IN SEMIFINAL ROUND

Easily Defeats Palmer, Considered Best Golfist in City or State-Wood Wins Over Jones in Easy Fashion.

many surprises were in store for the followers of the golfers engaged in the senie final round at the Country Club yesterday, not only in those who won, but also the comparative case with the surpriser matches. The surpriser matches with a few exceptions, to be comparative case with the defeat of Palmer by Howse, Palmer is considered and standard then the other, Woodward finally winning at the nineteenth hole. McAdams did not have to exert himmously as the best player in the unit mously as the best player in the match from him is a feat which any one may well feel proud of accomplishing. Yesterday Hawse had things his own way, due largely to his recovery from difficult lies, while Palmer was playing many strokes above his average game.

Harrison won his match with Peck, 3 and 1, by steady playing and by taking advantage at the start, and held it throughout, and was never in danger of losing.

The match between Hoover and Gray in the consolation see-sawed back and forth, Hoover finally winning on the home green, 2 up. Wood took Jones's measure, 5 and 3, and the ease in which he did it caused almost as much surprise as the Palmer-Hawse match.

Play day at Madison School, a new feature of school activity in Richmond, came to a brilliant close in an entertainment on the roof garden of that chool last night. For weeks the chilin the open and the events that were to crowd it. In solid lines, four abreast, they marched to Richmond College campus shortly before 1:20 o'clock with flags flying and standards bearing the legends, "More play," We want to play" and even "vote for play" shone out conspicuously as these happy children went through Franklin Street and Monroe Park, keeping their lines and Monroe Park, keeping the lines and Monroe Park, keeping their lines and Monroe Park, keeping the lines and Monroe Park, keeping the lines and Monroe Park, keeping their lines and Monroe Park, keeping their lines and Monroe Park, keeping the lines and Monroe Par abreast, they marched to Richmond College campus shortly before 1:30 o'clock with flags flying and standards bearing the legends, "More play," "We want to play" and even "vote for play" shone out conspicuously as these happy children went through Franklin Street and Monroe Park, keeping their lines intact and treading with the precision of soldiers.

The line, nearly three blocks long, was, indeed, an inspiring sight, and it is doubtful if Richmond has ever seen such an exhibition of the play spirit and of play activities that followed on the campus of Richmond College.

Dr. Boatwright welcomed the children to the spacious grounds of his college.

The events were then run off in grand style, hundreds of children participating in relays, dashes, potato races, folk dances, songs and every form of play activity.

The whole occasion passed off in excellent style. H. F. Tompkins, assistant principal of Madison School, deserves much credit for planning such a fine exhibition of athletic sports and play. He was ably assisted by the teaching force of the school, the principal, W. G. Jones, and by the physical director, L. T. Jones.

Madison School has developed a wonderful spirit of play among its pupils.
